

New Workshop Helps New US Citizens Get Past the Communication Barrier (Despite Their Native Language)

Portland Oregon — A serious barrier that a new arrival to the United States suffers is being misunderstood whenever they speak resulting in frustration for the new arrival and his/her employer or client. But a new company has introduced a course that will help speed the new arrivals entry into American culture faster and more smoothly.

Facilitated by Abhi Handa, the owner of American Accent Made Easy, "How To Speak Plainly And Be Understood" will provide tips, hacks and strategies on tackling American pronunciation. He will also cover the psychological advantage of clear and understandable communication.

The six-month workshop/course is held online and is available at <http://americanaccentmadeeasy.com/>. It is offered 24/7 at the student's convenience.

"This workshop will teach the newly arrived citizen quick tips and hacks so that they can get positive results right away," said Abhi Handa. "We've removed unnecessary technical terms and complex words in order to make the class quick and easy to follow and understand."

"The accent reduction industry is stuck with the model of complex learning of American pronunciation," said Handa. "Our aim is to get people up and going quickly so that they can have satisfaction on the job and create lasting relationships."
